Outcomes

The ROV Project led us to see the problems of marine litter in our own environment.

It highlighted the diversity of life in our rivers and ocean

It showed that #CitizenScience and Ocean Observation is important in the fight against marine litter.

This ocean data should be free and open to all.

A Clean & Healthy Ocean

Ocean Literacy is key in promoting the principles of human behavior on the health of the ocean.

It also illustrates the dependence of humanity on the ocean, we cannot live without it.

Showing the beauty of the sea – should enable people to participate in its stewardship/ caretaking role.

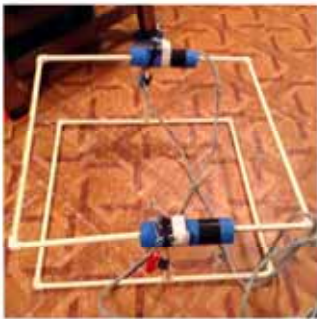

The development and design of the ROV's – Remember...there is no such thing as a failed experiment, Just an unexpected outcome. Alan Berry

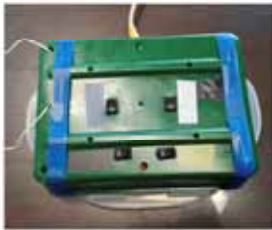

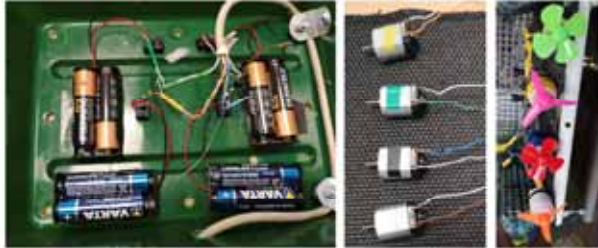

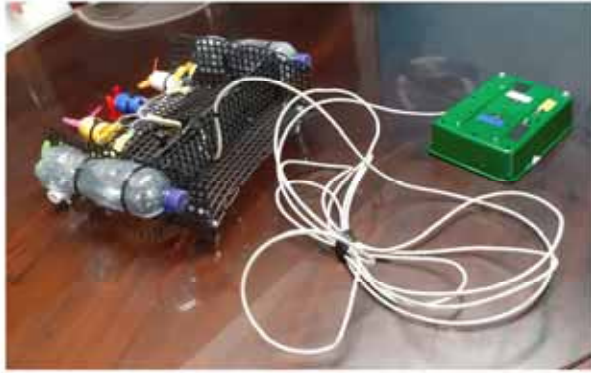

Some of our ROV students and their ROVs picture courtesy of Kat Bryant of the Daily World News Paper. She gave permission for us to use it with credits.

I love this picture, this was at the Taholah Tribal lands. It was a beautiful day and this was part of the footage caught on the ROV when the students didn't know their camera was on. It captures the happiness the project brought to so many students, the ROV work was fun, and most of all it was an excuse to get out and enjoy so many wonderful local waterways, and share ideas across the miles.

Finding a solution....
